Contents Saw II: Flesh & Blood includes, on launch day, a new game mode, the Story Mode, where you must play through all the episodes of the previous game, and can also access all the game's levels, and a new episode, John Doe, in which the main character, Bob Clark, is sent to the asylum to investigate why his pregnant wife, Lauren, has recently disappeared. In the game, the various characters you meet will provide different points of view in the plot. They can be either helpful, or hostile, to your survival. The game features many new weapons. The Sawblade, which is attached to a chain, can be used to cut through obstacles and other people. The Bang Stick can be used to stun people. The Stun Grenade can be thrown to stun people. In addition, the Sawblade, Chain Saw, Stun Grenade, and Buzz Grenade can be used to kill certain enemies and other people, e.g. people who become too strong, or who are seen as hindering your survival. The weapons can be upgraded, making them more powerful. You must scavenge the environment for items, as there are no weapons or ammunition to be found anywhere in the level. You are always equipped with a flashlight. You can use it to explore the environment at night, and also for certain survival tasks, such as turning on/off the electricity in a room. The flashlight also has a low battery level indicator. Depending on the type of flashlight, it can be refilled by digging or chipping away at certain surface material. All surfaces can be chipped away by using the appropriate tool from the main menu. The game also features an option for a score based on the number of items you find and keep hidden. A percentage of the score is awarded for the health and stamina of the player character. When the player dies, the game resets the game to the point where the player character is vulnerable to attack. The player can recover from the loss of a life, by either restarting the game, or saving the game at an earlier point. The player character has two main forms of health, Stamina and Health. Stamina is represented by the stamina bar at the bottom of the screen. It is depleted when the player character is attacked or when the player character falls, and then slowly replenishes over time, as the player character is not harmed by their fall. Stamina is also depleted when the player character touches 82157476af
